

WORK MADE HER TIRED

Mrs. Sharp Tells About Her Troubles, and How She Finally Won.

Mr. Pleasant, Tenn.—"Many a time," says Mrs. Jessie Sharp, of this place, "I wished I would die, and be relieved of my suffering, from womanly troubles. I could not get up, without pulling at something to help me. I had to stay in bed most of the time. I could not do my housework."

"The least amount of work tired me out. My head would swim, and I would tremble for an hour or more. Finally, I took Cardui, and I am not bothered with pains any more, and I don't have to go to bed. In fact, I am sound and well of all my troubles."

Cardui helped Mrs. Sharp to regain her health and strength, promptly. Cardui has helped thousands of other weak and ailing women, in the past 26 years, in many cases after other medicines had failed to relieve them.

Cardui goes to the weak spots, and helps to make them strong. It acts with nature—not against her. It is for the tired, nervous, irritable women, who feel as if everything was wrong, and need something to quiet their nerves and strengthen the worn-out system. Ask your druggist about it.

Why should it not help you? Try it. N. B.—Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., for Special Instructions, and 64-page book, "Home Treatment for Women," sent in plain wrapper, on request.

ON LEAVE OF ABSENCE FROM PHILIPPINES

CAPTAIN OF ISLAND CONSTABULARY TELLS OF SAVAGE TRIBES.

His Province Inhabited By "Head Hunters."

After five years service in the Philippine Islands, Captain J. D. Gallman, of the constabulary maintained by the United States government in the Pacific possessions, has been allowed a furlough of six months, and reached Phoenix last evening on his way to eastern points. Captain Gallman came in company of F. W. Killen of the bureau of audits of the Philippines, who will remain in this city or vicinity for some time in order to regain his health which has been undermined by his protracted stay in the islands, where he has lived for the last ten years.

The constabulary which has been organized along semi-police and semi-military lines for the preservation of order in the island possessions consists at present of about 5,000 enlisted men. The various groups of islands are kept under complete surveillance, and in order to increase the efficiency of the force in controlling the savage population a number of companies, made up entirely of volunteers from the natives, have been organized during the last few years.

In the sub-province of Iloga, in which Captain Gallman commands the constabulary, and also has authority as lieutenant governor, there are two companies of these native constables equipped with the latest model rifles, and the proficiency which they have attained in their drill and rifle practice was clearly proven by a number of photographs shown the reporter.

In several of these men were in their drills, carrying themselves like horn soldiers, and in another were seated in a body around a large silver prize cup which had been awarded them for proficiency in marksmanship. Their figures are soldierly and strong, and in the ranks they create no mean impression in the mind of the reviewer. Their uniform is the only thing about them which beggars description for it is almost too abbreviated for mention. It consists of a coat, hat, breech cloth, and two brass rings decorating the calves of the lanky legs. Trousers are conspicuously absent. Even this attire is a considerable improvement on their original

This book, written by a New York woman whose interest in women's clubs and in her fellow beings have been widely commented upon by the press, deals with a Cupid that was about his work with an idea of uplifting people and improving their condition.

"It is in fact as sensible a book as any one could wish it not to be, and is full of the volume is a kind of woman's rights book and really there is no answer to the plea set forth in novel form."—Buffalo Evening News.

"It is very evident the author has not written for the average novel reader, but has given a somewhat intimate account of the lives of her characters—well chosen people in conventional environment."—Troy Times.

"Two or three sweet little live stories run through the book, stories which serve to apply truths which she tells."—Troy Standard.

"An effective little story convincingly presenting the ideas of what may perhaps be called the typical twentieth century woman."—Newark Evening News.

costume, which was that usually effected by untamed savages.

Referring to these companies, Captain Gallman said: "These men were not allowed to have firearms under the Spanish regime. Our government, with a more liberal and broad understanding appealed to their loyalty and pride by giving them the opportunity to serve in the ranks of the constabulary, and they have proven themselves good and capable soldiers."

In the province of Iloga there are approximately 120,000 savages, members of the Igorotes, Kalinas, and Apayans tribes. These tribes have been frequently described as "head hunters," owing to a prevailing taste among their members to make comprehensive collections of the heads of their enemies. The majority of men now in the government constabulary have been head hunters in their time, and in one picture a native deputy was shown with three heads on a little table beside him. Two were the heads taken by the owner of the third, whose depredations finally precipitated the raid. The constabulary sent out a soldier with instructions to "get the head" of the murderer, and when he expressed fear as to the outcome of his mission, saying that the murderer "might" fight, the captain told him "you represent the law, and we send you to bring him in." He brought him, or his main member, and there was one savage less in the islands.

The native population still live in the very lowest state of savagery, and the Americans have not yet been able to persuade them to adopt civilized clothing or manners of living. However, conditions are steadily improving in the islands, and the enlistment of the native men in the ranks of the constabulary has had a decided influence in increasing their loyalty to the United States authorities. They have refrained from their murderous outbreaks which were so frequent during the Spanish rule, and seem to be settling down to a contented endurance of their new masters. They are of course absolutely incapable of self-government and their mentalities of the lowest order. The authority of the government is being exercised for their improvement and betterment in every possible way and as soon as it is considered advisable to undertake such innovations, schools will be established, and the natives will be given every opportunity to learn the ways of civilization and emerge from their savage state. The occupancy of these islands by the United States government has already been productive of surprising results in bringing order and peace among the native tribes, and will accomplish a vast amount of good when the native population progress to the point where they will be receptive to new ideas, and general education.

PILES BRING DESPAIR.

Take Courage! Internal Treatment Will Cure.

Piles make life unhappy and ruin the best disposition. Most sufferers have been bitterly disappointed by many failures to find a cure. A medicine in tablet form, taken internally, that avoids the unpleasant features of ointments, suppositories and operations, and cures thoroughly by removing the inside cause, is surely worth trying, especially as Lovett Drug Co., Phoenix, Ariz., and druggists everywhere guarantee it.

COMEDY PRESENTED TONIGHT AT ELKS

The Girl from Rectors Will Fascinate Phoenix.

A large cast will present "The Girl from Rectors" this evening at the Elks theater, and if the advance sale of tickets is any indication of a full house for the play, it is practically assured that the actors will take the boards before the theater taxed to its utmost capacity. This play has had great show centers of the east, notably in Chicago and New York, and its situations are so funny and the lines so clever that it will without doubt receive an ovation here.

The "Girl from Rectors" has been advertised as somewhat risqué, but is not to be taken as an indication of any immorality in the lines. The play is "spicy," but not bad, and if it sometimes approaches the danger line it never quite reaches it. The "Girl" is a good, healthy, spirited young lady who knows a thing or two herself, and although the situations in which she figures are not always soberly drawn or presented with a too religious desire to follow the line of probability or reality, the charm of the production is admitted and undeniable. It is a comedy, nothing more, but a comedy of a high order and the kind that takes.

After the sober moral of "The Climax," the breezy effervescence of "The Girl from Rectors" will seem like the student's "fest" after an all night session with the law books.

NOTED FINANCIER GUEST OF PHOENIX

PRESIDENT VANDERLIP, NATIONAL CITY BANK, NEW YORK.

His First Tour of the Southwest and Mexico.

On a tour of the Southern Pacific lines, Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York and one of the most prominent men in the world of finance, paid Phoenix a passing visit last evening. He had just returned from a trip of about five hundred miles into the interior of Mexico accompanied by Colonel Randolph and it had been the original intention of Colonel Randolph to accompany the party to Phoenix but his plans were disarranged and at Tucson C. M. Scott of the Arizona & Eastern became the guide and host of the visitor.

Traveling with Mr. Vanderlip and his wife are Ames Higgins, his private secretary; C. V. Rich, manager of the bond department of the National City institution; W. H. Keenan, a financier of Spokane, Washington; W. J. Doran, of Los Angeles; and J. H. Dyer, superintendent of the Tucson division of the Southern Pacific. A special train composed of Mr. Vanderlip's and Mr. Dyer's private cars accompanied the party.

Yesterday morning leaving Maricopa a run was made out over the Arizona & Eastern line to a point beyond Winkelman without stop. While returning a visit was made to the big Ray Consolidated smelter at Hayden. Arrangements had been made some time ago to put the big mill in operation for the first time yesterday and the honor of turning on the power was bestowed upon Mrs. Vanderlip. The power plant has been in operation for several weeks but none of the shafting in the mill had ever made a turn until 2:20 o'clock, when Mrs. Vanderlip threw out the power.

The scene was an intensely interesting one, most of the engineers and mechanics who had been connected with the construction of the mill being witnesses. Kodak pictures of the event were made and a brief reception followed when congratulations were extended to those whose work had proven such a success.

Probably the greatest interest in the event was taken by Mr. Vanderlip himself on account of his great interest in the Southern Pacific road of which the Arizona & Eastern is a feeder. The mill, it is estimated, will at once begin the reduction of sixty million tons of ore which means six to ten million cars of freight.

Leaving Hayden the party came to Phoenix and thence down on the Buckeye line as far as the Fashion ranch and the ostrich farm. Returning to Phoenix they left for Maricopa where Colonel Randolph will join them and they will leave for the Imperial Valley. In all the party has traveled about 400 miles and has a trip of about the same distance still before it.

Having just been in Mexico it was imagined Mr. Vanderlip might be able to give some interesting information on the economic situation. He had, however, encountered no disorder and had seen little if any of the revolution. There had been a battle the day prior to their arrival at Madero in which it was said about ten insurgents were killed.

The Monroe doctrine works two ways, and while I do not know that to be the case, I have no doubt that England for instance suggested that this country should protect English residents and interests in Mexico it would be just as necessary for us to do so as it would be for us to be able to say to England to keep her hands off.

It was the opinion of Mr. Vanderlip that the massing of the troops in the southwest along the Mexican border had been made for the purpose of being able on short notice to protect American and foreign interests. He however denied that request for such protection had come from any of the interests so prominently allied with the institution of which he is the head.

This was the first visit the financier had ever made to Mexico or into the southwestern part of the United States and he is making a study of the possibilities before the owner of an acre of land, as he had since visiting that section near Brownsville, Texas, and northern Mexico and the Salt River Valley. He even insisted that he had realized too late that there were possibilities in the west not afforded on Wall Street.

VINEGAR BOTTLES FAIL; HONEYED WORDS SUCCEED

Marshal Moore Uses Diplomacy to End a Chase That Leads Beneath the Foundations of a House.

After a chase that covered most of the Fourth ward, Marshal Moore yesterday afternoon ran J. Alexander underneath a house and then exerted his diplomacy to persuade the fugitive to come out and be arrested on a charge of attempting to steal a whole armful of trousers from the Boston store.

Alexander did not emerge from concealment, however, until some dozens of bottles had been carelessly tossed into the corner where he cowered. The chase and subsequent battle, with broken bottles figuring as weapons, was one of the most unique in Marshal Moore's career. He found, however, that it was easier to catch the particular fly he was after with honeyed words than vinegar bottles.

There was a little window in the high foundation and Moore persuaded a boy to climb through the narrow aperture for purposes of reconnaissance. The boy reported that the quarry was at bay.

Then the battle of bottles began. The marshal, with the boy and a clerk who had followed from the store, began to throw broken bottles toward Alexander, but every one went wide. It is no easy matter to hit a man lying at full length in a dark corner, when there is a floor above and the ground below to interfere with the trajectory of one's missiles.

Finally Moore began to argue loudly with the clerk. He was absolutely sure that the chap under the floor was not a thief, but a good fellow and desirable citizen in every sense of the term. It was not long before the individual under the floor crawled out. Moore then arrested him and furnished him quarters at the city hall until late in the afternoon when he was transferred to the county jail.

Alexander says he once worked for the reclamation service. He hears the appearance of a tramp.
